is about 25). When I kidded him about the Ukraine always fementing independence movements from the Seviet Union, he get very serious and said, with me, there was just one nationalist there who tried to set up some sort of independence movement but he wasn't too successful. I thought this was rather an under-statement.

Trakkien volunteered the information that he was the only child. He said he had a rather hard time of it when he was young for his father divorced his mather when he was two years old and there, therefore, his mother had to work quite hard to support him. He said that while he worked in the war factory during the war, he also attended night classes in an effort to better himself. He successfully passed the competitive examination to enter Moscow's Oriental Institute (course lasted five years) and upon completion of the Institute, he successfully passed examinations to enter the diplomatic service. He said he met his wife at the Institute and that they were married when he was 25. (He is now 28).

He seemed well briefed on the United States and on New York City in particular. He asked me how many people lived in New York and when I said 7 million, he said, "Oh no, it is 11 million" and seemed surprised that I didn't know. He also asked me how long Broadway was and when I said I didn't know, he laughingly said, "Roughly 92 kilomaters". I then said that foreigners kid Americans that they don't seem to know much about their own country and Trokhien seemed to agree.

He then got a bit jovial and started telling me a few antecdotes. He asked if I heard the one about the elephants. He said people of various mationalities were asked to write a thesis about an elephant and that the Englishman wrote on "The Hunting of the Elephant", the Frenchman wrote on "The Sex Life of the Elephant", the American worte on "The Elephant and Communism", the Pole on "The Elephant and the Polish Question", the German banded in a five volume thems on "An Introduction to the History of the Elephant" and the Enssian wrote about "The Elephant - Does it Exist". I then said, yes, I had heard the joke and that, as a matter of fact, it appeared in the Journal d'Egypte a few months ago. He seemed a bit deflated.

He asked me how I liked Russian caviar and I said that his caviar was much better than the one served at the November 7 reception. I then asked why there weren't any pictures of Malenkov at the reception and his only comment was, "You have very keen eyes".

	He then laughed and said he was quite surprised the other day when one Legation and asked for some Marxist literature. When I asked him why the fellow wanted it, he explained that the teacher told him that students at the asked if it were a political science teacher who made the request. He said he

	United States we studied the works of Engels, Marx, Lenin and Stalin as

The conversation switched to work that we do and I asked him what his duties were at his Legation. He said that he worked in the Political Section mainly specializing in relations with the countries adhering to the Arab Pact. He also added that the Seviet Minister, who doesn't speak English, takes him along to dinner aparties and various appointments to do translating for him. He then asked me if I wrote reports, hastingly adding "if that information wasn't secret". I said no my work is not secret, that I am mainly eccupied with the Ambassador and that in any spare time I secasionsily do write reports of a very minor nature.

I then asked him how his Arabic was coming along at the Berlitz School (he says he reads and writes Arabic quite well but cannot speak it, therefere Berlitz). He said he wasn't too satis fied with the Berlitz lessons, that they were too slow. I then jokingly asked him why he didn't take lessons. His cars perked up and he got quite interested. He mentioned that he didn't think they would allow Bussians to attend the American University, would they? I teld him if he wanted to, I could find out. At this he got very enthusiastic and said he would like very much to take lessons if it were possible. When I left their apartment at Il e'cleck, he again mentioned, "Don't forget to find out about that, will you?" Actually, I do plan to forget.

While we were talking about music, he mentioned that some of his Russian records should be arriving soon and that he would be very happy if I could hear them when they do arrive. I told him I, too, was expecting some records and that he and his wife should come to my apartment, have dinner and listen to the music. He mumbled, "Maybe". While talking about American literature he talked enthusiastically about Howard Fast asking if I had heard of him. He seemed puzzled when I told him that Fast was on the 'list' and smiled when I explained that I meant he was an American Communist writer. He also mentioned that he liked Paul Robeson.

In the course of previous conversation, I asked him who gold-tooth was at the Soviet Legation. "Oh, that's my good friend Barkovski". Barkovski's son, Leonidas, was born about one year and 3 months ago.

Comment

It is my personal opinion that all the questions asked me were the ones normally asked when two people meet each other socially for the first time. He never tried to pump me, he did not try to "ply me with liquor" and throughout the entire evening he and his wife were very courteons and quite charming. Also, their radio played all evening long, which, I am told, precludes the possibility that our conversation was recorded.
